

Leading Engaging Virtual Meetings

Date: Thursday, 9 April, 2:00-2:30pm

With the COVID-19 situation and companies implementing their BCP (business continuity plan), more people are working from home now. As a result, teams are having and leading more virtual remote meetings. Meetings are not necessarily the most exciting thing, and when virtual can be even less so, even draining. Research has shown also that when in a crisis, performance and productivity can decrease when working remotely. This free, highly interactive 30-minute virtual workshop demonstrates and engages you the participants in practical ways to lead and participate in virtual remote meetings, to make them energizing and engaging for yourself and your team.

Join Grant Bosnick, Managing Director of YES (Your Empowering Solutions), as he shares and demonstrates the top ways to engage people in a virtual environment to help make your meetings more effective and engaging, and help create a high performing team. This workshop is for any executive or leader leading a remote team.

Register here: <https://forms.gle/Y28HnBMnus6hkjnw7>

Places are limited.

About the Speaker

Grant Bosnick is the Managing Director of YES (Your Empowering Solutions), a consultant, executive coach and speaker. For 22 years he has partnered with clients to help them with their people strategies and develop leaders to transform their behaviour and mindsets, to lead others, drive change and perform at a higher level, and to execute in a rapidly changing and complex environment. Based in Singapore, he has lived in Asia Pacific for 22 years; and has worked all across Asia Pacific and the Middle East. And, as one of the pioneers globally of remote virtual learning, has delivered 100s of virtual leadership training sessions with over 25 countries, on 5 continents, as well as upskilling organisations' internal resources to lead virtual sessions.

Presented by

Supported by

